

Beautiful Churches ...OF... VARIOUS DENOMINATIONS Adorn the City.

New First Presbyterian Church.

Few of the leading religious denominations are unrepresented in Salt Lake City either by houses of worship of their own or by active local organizations. A large percentage of the population of the city is enrolled as members in these organizations. The religious institutions of the city are in flourishing condition. This is indicated by the new edifices in course of construction, and by the improvements that are planned by a number of the denominations.

Among the denominations represented in the city are the Adventists, Baptists, Catholics, Christians, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Congregational, Episcopal, Evangelical, Hebrew, Josephite, Lutheran, Methodist Episcopal, Presbyterian, Scientists, Unitarian. In addition to these there are a number of undenominational organizations that carry on important religious work.

Catholics are at work on the most expensive edifice erected in Salt Lake City since the completion of the Mormon temple. This is St. Mary's cathedral on the corner of Brigham and B streets. This has been under construction for the past five years, and is still far from complete, but it is far enough along to afford an idea of its grandeur when completed. It will cost in the neighborhood of $500,000.

Outnumbering any other denomination in the city by thousands, the Mormons are continually erecting larger and better meeting houses in different parts of the city than they have had heretofore. In addition to their temple, tabernacle and assembly hall, they have thirty-one ward meeting houses scattered over the city.

An edifice that is greatly admired by visitors in the city is the new First Presbyterian church on the corner of Brigham and C streets. This is a fine piece of architecture and the interior arrangements are admirable. This building is nearing completion, while the old home of the denomination on Second South and Second East streets is being altered into a business house. The sum of $28,000 was paid for the site of the new Presbyterian church, and upward of $100,000 is being expended on the building. A handsome parsonage is to be erected on the ground adjoining the church on the east.

Methodists Show Enterprise.

It would be difficult for a denomination to exhibit greater enterprise than is being shown by the Methodist Episcopal church of this city. A few months ago the old church home on Third South street, between Main and State, was sold and a lot purchased on the corner of Second East and Second South streets. A beautiful new church to cost approximately $80,000 is going up on the site, while the old building down town is being transformed into a rooming house and business block.

Episcopalians have made extensive improvements in St. Mark's cathedral in recent times. This denomination as well as some of the others has shown a spirit of progress that is commendable in every way. A movement is on among the Baptists to combine their two congregations, sell the old church properties and erect one fine new church building on the East Side. This, it is thought, will be done within the year now opening.

Salt Lake City is fully abreast of the most advanced cities of the west, both as to the character of church edifices and the extent of genuine church work being done.

THEATRICAL EXPENSES.

Some enterprising and industrious statisticians in the east have compiled a list of the approximate expenditures during each season of the leading theatrical firms of the United States. According to his statement, the largest dispensers of money are Klaw & Erlanger, who in the forty weeks the season lasts distribute no less than $1,070,000 among their creditors. The amounts run as follows: To actors, $175,000; for scenery, $100,000; for royalties, $260,000; for railroads, $235,000; to printers, $110,000; and for costumes, $200,000. Next in the list of cash scatterers stands Henry W. Savage, who is accredited with disposing of $905,000 every season. Then comes Charles Frohman with $705,000, then William A.

P. BULLER BREWING CO.

One of the largest of home industries is that of the P. Buller Brewing Co., makers of two delicious beverages, Buller's Beer and Porter.

It is acknowledged by experts to be the peer of all others in this intermountain country as well as all eastern brands.

The company have an immense brewery at 217 N. 2d West, where a large force of men are employed.

A visit to this establishment would convince you of the absolute purity of Buller's Beer and you would not wonder that the thousands of people not only in Salt Lake but all intermediate towns call for and demand Buller's Beer.

Peter Buller, the manager of the company, is acknowledged to be second to none in the art of brewing and every gallon made in his establishment is under his direct supervision. Mr. Buller is certainly a credit to the city for he has by careful management and honest methods built up a business that the community should be proud of. He creates a market for the farmers' hops and then sends out a beverage that is pure, refreshing and healthful.

A specialty is made of family trade, although the company ships daily to all points in Utah. When you are tired and thirsty think of Buller's Beer and call up Ind. 1185, Bell 1303 Y.
